

Perry County Opera House And Cultural Arts Center, Inc.

To Whom It May Concern:

The New Lexington Town Hall built in 1887 by William Jackson Rose which once housed the City Hall, Fire Department, and Opera House will become the new home to a nonprofit group entitled the Perry County Opera House and Cultural Arts Center, Inc. Its mission is to preserve the historical integrity of the building through restoration and to provide Perry County with a public facility that will house a museum, black box theatre, art gallery, and eventually the restored opera house. Coupled with the City of New Lexington's revitalization of their downtown area project, this facility will bring much needed culture to our Appalachian area for local residents as well as increase tourism to the downtown area.

As with any new venture, financial support as well as any in-kind donations will be needed. As a resident of Perry County and/or supportive individual outside of the county, I am in full support of this ambitious undertaking and ask that you give the Perry County Opera House and Cultural Arts Center, Inc. your utmost consideration for grant monies and any other financial or in-kind donations.

Respectfully submitted,
